

Katarina Khosravi

Katarina is originally from Slovakia but has lived in North America for the last 30 years, residing in Vermont for the past 13. Her passion lies in traveling and learning about other cultures. Therefore, when she moved to Vermont, she reached out to VCWA to volunteer and host international visitors. She is honored to be a part of the VCWA Board now. Her journeys have taken her to Asia, Europe, and Australia and she spent 6 months volunteering and living in India, in the beautiful state of Uttarakhand at the foothills of the Himalayas.

Throughout her career, she has worked in banking and education and, alongside her husband, ran a successful business. Finally, she found meaning in the non-profit sector and now works for The Flynn as a development officer. She firmly believes that art should be an inseparable part of every child's education, as its value extends beyond mere aesthetic experience to the ability to transform, inspire, develop, and heal. She is a proud mother of 3 daughters.
