

Katia is a pediatrician who leads the clinical team of Save the Children's Emergency Health Unit as Senior Clinical Manager. She is originally from Brazil where she completed her medical training but has lived in Vermont for 5 years. Her work is dedicated to providing life-saving healthcare services to vulnerable communities affected by humanitarian crises. She is passionate about health equity, cultural sensitivity, and awareness; for which she advocates in every response. She has had the opportunity to work in many diverse contexts; Brazil, Afghanistan, South Sudan, Syria, Haiti, and Colombia (just to name a few) and every new experience has intensified her commitment to supporting access to healthcare for those who need it most.
